Achieving quality, safety, and compliance for the behavioral health population

Mitigating accreditation, compliance, and quality challenges across the continuum

Institutions nationwide are confronting an escalating wave of challenges in care of behavioral health patients—whether in the emergency department, general acute care units, or dedicated psychiatric settings. Regulatory scrutiny is intensifying, patient acuity is rising, and the margin for error has never been smaller.

This webinar brings together seasoned faculty who have been in the trenches, partnering with hospitals and health systems to address these challenges head-on. Drawing on decades of real-world clinical and regulatory experience, they will share proven, real-world strategies for managing high-risk situations, including the care of patients requiring suicide precautions, often-prolonged episodes of boarding behavioral health patients in the ED, post-suicide-attempt care of patients on medical units, de-escalating behavior, appreciating co-morbid medical conditions, and implementing effective treatment plans.

Attendees will gain actionable insights grounded in both patient safety and accreditation expectations, helping teams reduce risk, improve outcomes, and remain survey-ready across all care settings.
